Americans in the emerging fourth world nation don't mess with stocks any more, they pull out before ejaculation when everything goes blooey, back off the old model, gears are stripped, motor is knocking, exhaust is spewing toxic smoke, time to form up co-ops, share housing, gardens, transportation, get a doctor and dentist in the group, connect with other groups over the internet, sharing of secrets of how to live happily and healthily in low income mode, taking care of things is the goal not participating in the destruction of things.

The Whole Earth Catalog was a phenom at the time because it provided a forum for people who were going out into the country on their own wanting to build their own places, form their communal groups, grow their own food, live the real American dream which is to be free of credit debt anbd government intrusion, and still pay their taxes and support schools and roads with the freedom of movement to travel and go everywhere.

Today we need a new forum like that. It can exist on the internet. A website called The Whole Earth Forum. Where people contribute their knowledge, like how to get out of a mortgage, how to live without credit cards, how to form commuinites of like minded people, in short how to turn America into a country which I call an emerging fourth world nation, one in which growth and expansion and big house big car big ego big boss are shelved in favor of smaller materialistic goals and greater family and community goals leading to less stressful lives richer in happiness and spiritual fulfillment.

A resource, almost a university of the web, anyone can access it, (long as they can get online, but anywhere there is a library that is possible these days) find out answers to their problems.
